Index Guide

The numbers refer to the headings under which the words or phrases occur. When the same word or phrase can be used in various senses, the several headings under which it, or its synonyms, will be found are indicated by italics. These words in italics are not intended to explain the meaning of the word or phrase to which they are annexed, but only to assist in the required reference.

Italicized references within parentheses are merely suggestive, the parentheses indicating that the term itself is not included in the list referred to.

When the word given in the Index Guide is itself the title or heading of a category, the reference number is printed in bold-face type, thus: abode 189.

To keep the Index Guide—necessarily very large—from becoming unwieldy, a considerable number of obsolete, rare, foreign, dialectic, and slang terms have been omitted. Such words, while useful in the text, are not the ones for which synonyms would ordinarily be sought.

Derivatives likewise have been sparingly admitted, since the allied or basic term will serve as a key to the various derived forms; thus, cold is given, but not coldness or coldly. By such means, unnecessary duplication is avoided.

IMPORTANT NOTE

The numbers following all references in this Index Guide refer to the section numbers in the text, and not to pages. Thus "Aaronic 995" refers to section 995, under which the citation will be found. For further ease of reference, the section numbers will be found at the top of every page.

HOW TO USE ROGET'S UNIVERSITY THESAURUS

The most common use for a thesaurus is to find a word that precisely fits a thought you wish to express.

Let us assume that you have written this sentence:

The ship sailed at dawn.

You may be dissatisfied with the word ship because it does not specify precisely the type of ship you have in mind. You think for a moment but cannot bring to mind the word you should use. Rather than spend any more time trying to recall the word, you turn to your Roget University Thesaurus.

First you look up ship in the index to the thesaurus. On page 566, column 3, you find the following:

The words listed under ship are keys to larger listings of words that are related to it in various ways. For instance, the subentry transfer would lead you to a list of words that are close in meaning to the sense of ship that means to transfer (transport, convey, carry, etc.).

Obviously, transfer is not the meaning of ship that you have in mind. You are looking for a type of vessel, and you find that vessel is also a subentry of ship, so you know your thesaurus will help you. The number that follows vessel, 273, is the number of the category of words that will include the word you are looking for.

So you turn to the major section of your thesaurus, looking for 273. Ship. You get there quickly by scanning the numbers in red that appear at the top of each page. You find the beginning of 273. Ship on page 84. The synonyms you see read in part as follows:
